Valley View Cottage

A mountain second home designed to make every square foot count

A warm, carefully scaled cottage with a generous covered porch

The first of many.

A compact plan with a generous feel

Valley View Cottage was the first home in a series of thoughtfully scaled mountain houses. Designed from the ground up as a two-bedroom second home, it pairs an exceptionally efficient plan with the warmth, craftsmanship, and finish quality people expect from a much larger and more expensive house.

Inspired by European homes where careful planning makes smaller spaces work beautifully, the design gives every room a clear purpose. Eight-foot doors, abundant wood, and high-end finishes create a sense of openness and quality while making the most of the footprint.

Gathering spaces

The family room is organized around a gas fireplace, with an integrated day bed that adds flexible sleeping space without sacrificing the room's welcoming feel. Wood ceilings, trim, and thoughtful window placement carry warmth through the cottage.

Private rooms and everyday comfort

Both bedrooms are sized for full king beds. Each has access to a full walk-in bathroom with a walk-in shower, bringing the comfort and privacy of a larger home into a compact two-bedroom plan.

Kitchen and outdoor living

The kitchen is planned as a practical, well-finished part of the compact layout. Outside, the covered deck extends the living area and offers room to sit and enjoy the mountain air.

Designed to welcome more

The cottage was intended primarily for two people, with the day bed and two king bedrooms allowing it to accommodate as many as five or six guests. A dedicated laundry room and two full baths make longer stays more comfortable.

An original design

We created Valley View Cottage and its drawings from the ground up, and we own those drawings. The plans are original work and may not be duplicated.
